What is CELP?

The Catalina Environmental Leadership Program (CELP, pronounced "kelp") is an overnight outdoor education program located on the beautiful west end of Catalina Island off the coast of southern California. CELP combines the experience and creative efforts of Catalina Island Camps (www.catalinaislandcamps.com) and the Ocean Futures Society (www.oceanfutures.org), led by world renown ocean explorer Jean Michel Cousteau. While at CELP, students are led on a variety of land and sea activities, each blending outdoor adventure with learning and team building. Learn more about CELP by visiting our website (www.celp.net).

The Site

School groups stay at the camp at Howlands Landing on the California-facing side of Santa Catalina Island, about 22 miles from the port of Los Angeles. Several hundred feet of beach and a private pier provide access to the beautiful waters surrounding Catalina Island. The secluded spot allows for ample exploration of the island's unique and unspoiled plant and animal life. In addition to the location there are many other qualities that make the site ideal for school year programs.

All students and school chaperones live in simple yet comfortable and clean cabins located right on the beach or in a field overlooking the ocean. Restroom and shower facilities are in close proximity to all cabins.

The kitchen staff provides three well-rounded meals a day and can accommodate a variety special dietary needs if properly notified.

CELP Instructors are first aid, CPR, and lifeguard certified. They are hired based on skills, character, personality, attitude, and leadership ability.

Travel to the Island

Groups visiting CELP travel on the Catalina Express ferry from San Pedro, California, home of the Port of Los Angeles. The ferry ride takes a little over an hour. Schools may be traveling to the camp with student's from other schools. For information about the Catalina Express, visit www.catalinaexpress.com.
